Quality is everything.

We cook with Eric Menchon, chef of Le Moissonnier, Cologne.

It is early morning in Cologne. The sky still lies dark over the city, while at the wholesale market goods have already been sorted, stacked and inspected for hours. This is where Eric Menchon's day begins today. Not in the kitchen of his restaurant, Le Moissonnier, which has been awarded two Michelin stars among other honours, but at the place where quality has its origin – with the producer, in the selection, in the conversation.

Eric doesn't come to buy. He comes to see. To check, to smell, to ask questions. His gaze is trained, alert and demanding, yet full of respect. One aubergine goes unnoticed, another makes him pause for a moment. He runs his fingers over the surface, nods, says nothing. This early encounter with the product is a quiet ritual for him – a dialogue between field, producer and kitchen.

"The quality of a dish begins long before it is prepared," says Menchon, who grew up in Pertuis in southern France. For more than 30 years, he has shaped Germany's fine-dining scene and, with his unmistakable signature, has taken French cuisine to a new level with Moroccan influences.

Gourmets and fellow chefs alike admire his uncompromising attitude as much as his creative precision. Yet anyone who meets him here at the wholesale market does not encounter a star conductor – but a seeker.

Eric has known many of the traders for decades. He is interested in what comes "before" – long before the product makes its grand appearance on the plate. It's not about exoticism, but about expression. About pure flavour. About vegetables with character. About fruit that is more than just sweet.

Here, amid crates and voices, aromas and colours, his inspiration begins. And he takes something with him: impressions, ideas, perhaps simply the good feeling of having been at the source of flavour. Because for Eric Menchon, quality is not just a matter of craftsmanship. It is an attitude. And sometimes it begins while the city is still asleep.

Nothing goes to waste: good cooking is sustainable.

A little later, a palpable tension already fills Le Moissonnier. In the kitchen, the air is dense – heat from the stove, steam from the stock, quick steps, short commands. Chef Eric Menchon works with intense focus at the centre of his brigade. Not a word too many, not a movement wasted – everything is controlled and precise.

"With good products, nothing gets thrown away. Fish frames, bones and offal are what give a sauce its real depth of flavour," says Eric.

Here, in his realm of stainless steel, ceramics and glowing fire, what began in the morning at the market now comes to fruition. Seconds matter. A fish cooked à point, vegetables with exactly the right texture, sauces shimmering like silk. Menchon's hands move with almost dance-like precision.

Every action carries weight. Every detail counts. He checks, tastes, adjusts – with the relentless passion of a perfectionist.

His brigade – a well-coordinated ensemble of young talents and experienced professionals – follows him with respect and enthusiasm. Work is highly focused, yet there is laughter too. Because anyone who cooks with Menchon knows: this is haute cuisine – at the highest level, but never aloof.

BP® suits us.

"You ask why my team and I wear BP®? Quite simply, this brand is fun: the quality is right and sustainability plays an important role. You simply get more out of the jackets and trousers for longer," says Eric Menchon, then raising his arms, "and on top of that, they're so light and comfortable!"

Thank you, Eric!

The lacquered red mullet, grilled over charcoal, has even made it into the documentation of the flavour archive of the German Archive of Culinary Heritage at the Saxon State and University Library Dresden.

Eric Menchon, born in 1965 in Aix-en-Provence, is a leading French chef, and his restaurant Le Moissonnier is a culinary institution in Cologne.

As head chef of Le Moissonnier, he has shaped Germany's gourmet scene since 1987 and has been honoured with two Michelin stars as well as numerous awards, including "Chef of the Year". His cuisine combines classic French craftsmanship with modern precision and creative depth. Since 2023, he has been running Le Moissonnier as a modern bistro – and was once again awarded a Michelin star.

BP® chef's jackets.

A professional appearance, made easy.

Passion and skill are also reflected in clothing. A BP® chef's jacket makes this aspiration visible – with a modern design, a range of colours and a comfortable fit that moves with you.

Ventilation inserts made from BP® mesh ensure a comfortable body climate. The arm lift system supports freedom of movement with every movement. Ergonomically cut sleeves and functional details such as sleeve pockets make everyday work easier.
